"Yes, but I think I could do something to help if I just knew what..."

"Aurora," he gave me a stern look that he must have learned from Mum. "don't try and pry any information from me. You promised Mum and Dad, remember? Nanny Beam, Mr. Vermore and Mum have everything under control and there's really nothing you can do. So just come and enjoy some ice cream."

He put his arm round me and led me to the table as Dad happily put bowls of ice cream covered in chocolate sauce and sprinkles in front of us.

That night as I got ready for bed, I couldn't get what he said out of my head and one phrase seemed to be on repeat in my brain.

There's really nothing you can do.

Tidying my room by throwing all the clothes on the bed into a jumbled pile on the floor, I picked up the special Lightning Girl jacket that George had designed for me earlier in the year for my countless photo shoots. I traced the big lightning bolt that was stitched across the back with my finger and then let out a long sigh, throwing it across the room onto the top of the pile.
